

The Institute of Justice invites students and young academics to participate in SUMMER SCHOOL – CHRISTIANS AND THEIR RELIGIOUS FREEDOM which will take place in Toruń (15th-20th July 2019).

The workshops will be financed by the Ministry of Justice as part of the project on counteracting the persecution of Christians in the world. There will be two editions of Summer School: the first one will take place in Toruń in 2019 and the other one in Warsaw in 2020.

Aid to the Church in Need, an international pastoral aid organization, estimates that today, even three-quarters of all victims of religious persecution are Christians. Our Summer School aims to increase students' sensitivity and awareness to the presence of persecution, various forms of discrimination and prejudices against Christians, and to indicate ways to counteract these tendencies. The workshops will include lectures and seminars. The classes will be conducted by invited specialists:

- dr Saša Horvat (Croatia)
- dr Daniel Moulin-Stožek (Great Britain)
- prof. Martin Tamcke (Germany)
- dr Maria Moulin-Stožek (Great Britain)

The participants of the Summer School are asked to prepare a 20-minute presentations on the theme selected from the list of suggested topics. Due to the limited number of places, applications will be considered based on the substantive evaluation of the original written work. It is possible to include issues from the legal, historical, sociological, philosophical, anthropological, cultural and religious studies, literary studies, media studies and others. Language: English, the length of presentation: 4000–6000 characters (with spaces), format: pdf, subject: religious freedom - threats, insights, solutions. The application form should be sent with an abstract of 1000-2000 words in English with keywords.

The application form should be sent to religiousfreedomiws@gmail.com. Deadline: 15th April 2019.

The organizers provide accommodation, meals and materials for participants.
Summer School organizers do not cover travel costs.
