WE LIVE IN A TIME marked by multiple crises in the world, as well as in the Catholic Church and theology. Those crises urgently require new ways of solving problems. Through their research topics, postgraduate students of theology will open several thematic hotspots in the fields of religious education, practical theology, moral theology, and Church history. Emerging questions will be elaborated, and the directions in which answers can be sought will be shown. The seminar is an opportunity for students to present and discuss their research in an international environment and interdisciplinary dialogue, and therefore move further on with their work.
